Few Soldiers able to give blood at Hunter

Staff Sgt. Craig Zentkovich

NCOIC, Hunter Public Affairs Office

The American Red Cross held a blood drive Friday at the ACS building at Hunter Army Airfield.

Their goal at the beginning of the day was 25 donors, but due to donor restrictions based on where Soldiers deployed, only five were qualified to donate.

"Before the deployment (of 3rd Infantry Division and tenant units) to Iraq, we had close to fifty donors for a blood drive," said Ruby Dunham-Riley, Savannah Chapter of the American Red Cross, team supervisor for blood services. "But Soldiers who've been to Iraq have to wait a year after redeployment until they are eligible to donate again."

According to Dunham-Riley, this is a major contributing factor to the Red Cross' shortage. "(The blood bank) has less than a day's supply on hand. Two years ago we had more than a two-day supply — it's really made a difference."

For Maj. Mike Musiol, Aviation Brigade logistics officer, the idea of donating was a no-brainer.

"I was walking by my headquarters building and saw the sign, so I figured I'd come down and donate," said Musiol, who began donating as a cadet at West Point. "It's the right thing to do."

Dunham-Riley attributed dwindling donor numbers to the lack of knowledge in the community of blood drives.

"We want to get people out there that are eligible to give

The 3rd Infantry Division band played an Armed Forces "Salute to the Troops" concert at Neptune Park on St. Simons Island, Ga. Sunday.

The Golden Isles Chapters of Military Officers Association of America and the Navy League invited the band to entertain.

Maj. Gen. William G. Webster, Jr., 3rd Inf. Div. commanding general spoke and introduced the band to the community, which included veteran's organizations from every military service.

"It is an honor and privilege to perform for you today," said Chief Warrant Officer 3 Fred J. Catchings, 3rd Inf. Div. band commander.

Before the concert, the MOAA presented a contribution to the 3rd Inf. Div.

"I would like to thank the MOAA for this contribution to our Soldiers through the Chaplain's fund at Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield," Webster said.

The band started with the National Anthem followed by concert band selections and stage band selections. A medley of each service's theme was included in the festivities.

The concert band played a variety of traditional military selections.

"I can't thank Soldiers enough for what they are doing for their country," said retired Brig. Gen. Fred W. Collins,

Windsor Forest students visit Hunter

Staff Sgt. Craig Zentkovich

NCOIC, Hunter Public Affairs Office

Windsor Forest Elementary School fifth graders had an opportunity to learn about the Army and Soldiers when they visited the Immediate Readiness Company Hangar at Hunter Army Airfield May 13.

The visit, sponsored by 603rd Aviation Support Battalion, is part of Hunter's Adopt-a-School Program.

The program, which was initiated six months ago by Hunter education liaison Barbara Jenkin, involves units from Hunter supporting schools in Savannah through tutoring and mentorship programs.

"It's a good program," said Maj.

Mark Weinerth, 603rd ASB executive officer. "It represents what we do — establish good relations with the community and local schools."

According to Weinerth, the program simply "gives students an understanding of what's going on at Hunter."

The class arrived at the IRC Hangar at 10 a.m. and received a short lecture on what kind of work is done by Soldiers at Hunter, followed by a slideshow of the 603rd's involvement in Operation Iraqi Freedom.

The meat-and-potatoes of the visit, according to the students, was the opportunity to learn about the Army vehicles on display — M1A2 Abrams tank, M2A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicle, M998 Humvee,

3rd MP Bn. recognizes JROTC cadets

Liberty County High School Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps cadets in the Panther Battalion were awarded commander's coins of excellence from the 3rd Military Police Battalion in an awards ceremony May 13 at the school.

The awards are one way of recognizing the cadets who performed outstandingly in the final drill competition, according to Lt. Col. John M. Huey, 3rd Military Police Battalion commander.

The Soldiers of 3rd MP Bn., who are sponsors at Liberty, help out in any way they can throughout the year and make their final visit at the end of the school year to recognize individuals in the cadre and cadets that help make the JROTC program and school work so well.

"They (the cadets) have done an outstanding job in their drill competitions and throughout the year have displayed good qualities of leadership, discipline, and academic excellence," said Command Sgt. Maj. Charles Kirkland, 3rd MP Bn. command sergeant major. "So it's an honor and privilege to stand among them and recognize them with awards today because they are extremely important to the future of our military."

Commander's coins are given to Soldiers and civilians who have performed exceptional services and go the extra mile to get a job done.

In the ceremony, Marcus

Holloway, Nolan Golden, Taylor Semken, and Scottie Heller were awarded commander's coins for their outstanding individual drill performances in the 6th Annual Drill and Ceremony competition April 28 at Fort Stewart.

Marcus Holloway, a senior at Liberty and recipient of a commander's coin, said he values the award because he is enlisting in the Army. He said the recognition one brings into the Army can go a long way in helping begin a military career, like promotion points from awards.

"This is a great way to honor the future leaders of America because they have so much potential and any opportunity to tell them 'good job', or recognize their work should be taken," said Col. Joe Barthel, Winn Army Hospital commander.

The JROTC awards ceremony is held at the end of each school year to thank the outstanding cadets.

"The cadets we train at Liberty County High School do so much and work so hard — a ceremony is just our way to let them know we see and recognize their efforts," retired Lt. Col. William Sutton, Liberty County High School senior Army instructor.

During the ceremony, the Daughters of the American Revolution, Scottish American Military Society, and veterans associations also gave cadets awards for outstanding achievements and leadership ability.

who attended the concert.

After the concert band finished, some of its members set up for the show band performance. The show band played some upbeat jazz, swing and Motown classics.

"They played a lot of music from my day," Collins said.

"The band brought back many memories, and I especially liked the swing," added Jane Cariker.

During the service medley, as the band played each service's song, veterans were asked to stand to represent their branches.

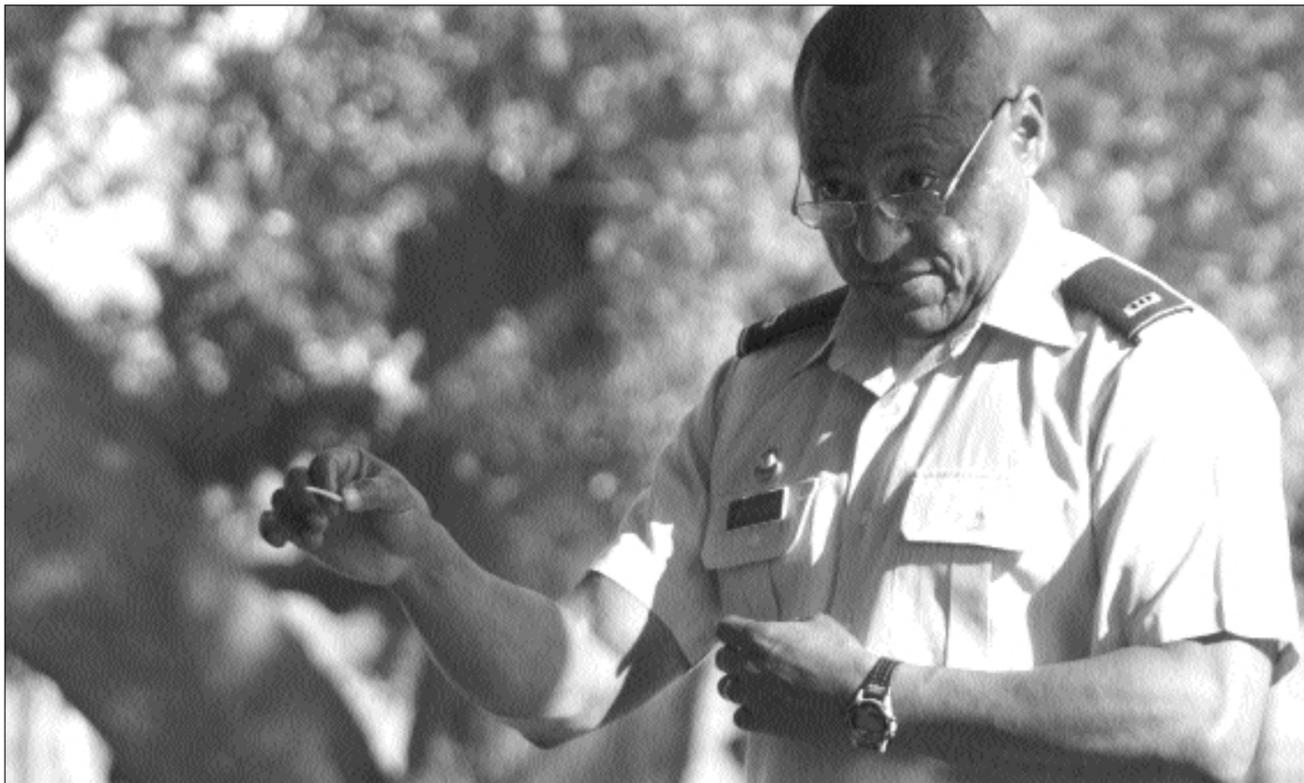

"We are indebted to all the veterans and retirees in the area for all the sacrifices they and their families have made," Catchings said.

Many of those in attendance were MOAA members, which are retired and former military officers. MOAA's main mission is to fund scholarships for three local high schools.

Cariker said, "This was such a treat to get to listen to them on this beautiful evening."

blood," she said. "There's more than enough eligible donors at Hunter — they just need to be informed."

Persons at Hunter and Fort Stewart who are eligible to donate, need only wait 56 days before giving again.

The donation process takes no more than 20 minutes. Those who completely object to a needle piercing their skin should keep in mind that the brief moment of discomfort could save someone's life — not to mention earn you a free doughnut and juice.

"I really liked the (M1A2 Abrams) tank — that was my favorite," said Chris Odey, 5. "And I liked talking to the Soldiers about what they do and what it's like to be in the Army."

The big hit of the day was the HEMMT — not because of its size or its purpose, but because of its two horns that every student in the class found it necessary to honk over and over again.

Aside from the HEMMT horn symphony, teachers and chaperones on the trip were very pleased with the morning.

"This is wonderful — the kids are having a great time," said Carol Ogel, Windsor Forest teacher and field trip coordinator. "And I can't say enough for the military (and 603rd ASB) for supporting this."

Ogel continued by saying this was an excellent opportunity "to expose the students to a lot of different opportunities in the military," and added, "Kids can't be too young before thinking about their future."

"(The Adopt-a-School) program is great," she said. "I'm looking forward to furthering our relationship in the future."

Hunter Units interested in participating in the Adopt-a-School Program can contact Barbara Jenkin at 352-6586.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

It's not my job

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) George Spencer

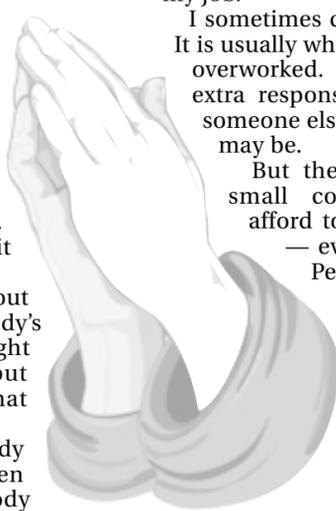

Special to The Frontline

This is a simple story about four people: Everybody, Somebody, Anybody and Nobody.

There was an important job to be done and Everybody was sure that Somebody would do it. Anybody could have done it but Nobody did it.

Somebody got angry about that, because it was Everybody's job. Everybody thought Anybody could do it but Nobody realized that Everybody wouldn't do it.

It ended up that Everybody blamed Somebody when Nobody did what Anybody should have done.

"Well, somebody else should have done that," Everybody said. "That's not my job."

I sometimes catch myself saying that. It is usually when I am tired and feeling overworked. Maybe I don't want the extra responsibility. I would rather someone else do "it" — whatever "it" may be.

But the truth be told, in this small community, we cannot afford to let any job go undone — even if it is not "our job."

People are always depending on us.

The success of the mission depends on each and every one of us. Don't count on Everybody, Somebody, Anybody or Nobody to do the job for you.

Do it yourself. Make sure the job gets done.
