Phone counseling (formerly Military One Source) is now available for personal support and referrals to military and community. For help, call 800-655-4545 or visit online at www.armyone-source.com.

Military Spouse Award

Proctor & Gamble Military Markets is sponsoring the new American Military Spouse Award at "The 9th annual American Veteran Awards: A Tribute to Freedom presented by Anheuser-Busch Companies." The award will be given to four people who have demonstrated exceptional volunteer accomplishments, selfless giving to others in the community, and the ability to sustain the home front during long deployments and times of family separation. The four recipients will receive paid travel accommodations to attend the TV taping in Beverly Hills, Calif. from Nov. 20 to 23. The American Veteran Awards will premiere on The History Channel in February and on the Armed Forces Network.

Pick up nomination forms at the commissary or enter online at <http://www.avashow.com>. Nominations must be received by 12 a.m. Pacific Standard Time, Nov. 9.

Thanksgiving fundraiser

The American Red Cross is hosting a fundraiser at the Commissary. Stop by and register to win a Thanksgiving turkey donated by the Commissary poultry vendor. There will be five turkeys to be given away and the Red Cross will be accepting donations for its volunteer program. No donation is necessary to participate in the drawing.

For more information call Station Manager at 767-4750.

'Bling' invades old PX

Sgt. Mason T. Lowery

Staff Writer

Stereos blasted and "bling" was on display in the old PX parking lot Sunday as car aficionados vied for the honors of "Best Car" and "Best Audio System."

Approximately 50 cars and their owners strutted their stuff for the prizes, and to raise money for trips for the Fort Stewart Better Opportunities For Single Soldiers program.

Sgt. Norma Kline, BOSS president, said she got the idea from Fort Campbell, Ky., "I figured it was a good idea, lots of soldiers are into their cars and music."

The noise was deafening as audio competitors warmed up their amps, sub-woofers, tweeters and capacitors.

Staff Sgt. Gregory Lockett, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 4th Battalion, 64th Armor, warmed his system up and actually made the ground shake. His system used so much power; he installed an extra battery to handle it. Two 12-inch subwoofers, powered by a 1200-watt amp, sat in the back of his Ford Expedition, which sat on 24-inch rims. He also had four 5"x7" door speakers, powered by a 300-watt amp, four tweeters, and a bass capacitor (used to store power for his bass) to round out his system.

"I just love the sound. I'm in the Mortar Platoon. I already can't hear, so I have to crank the stereo," Lockett said, explaining the reason for his system.

Hydraulics, Lambo doors, custom paint jobs, rims and engine modifications dominated the "Best Car" side of the competition.

Spc. Jeffrey Chin, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry entered his '98 Honda Civic Coupe. He has spent two years and approximately $10,000 customizing his car, and was quick to point out that "This wouldn't have been possible without the support of my loving wife."

On the style side, his civic has a cameo white paint job with a red pearl overcoat (that you can only see under neon lights); 18-inch-rims; red-tinted windows; front, side and rear fairings, 3-D gauges; and special headlights, but the most striking aspect are his Lambo doors. His Civic's doors open like a Lamborghini's or a DeLorean's. "It looks good; it's an attention getter," Chin explained.

"It's just a hobby, just something I do."

Block party promotes families

Soldiers and their families participated in the Army Community Service's 3rd Annual Block Party Oct. 25 outside the ACS building in observance of Domestic Violence Awareness Month.

Some of the attractions included booths set up for drug and alcohol awareness, fire prevention, and emergency child identification. Children had their faces painted and met with Smokey the Bear.

A booth for people wishing to participate in foster care was also open.

"If we have military children who need foster care, it would be nice to have a military family help them," said Johnny Cusimano, the Family Advocacy Program manager at ACS.

Firefighters and military police held demonstrations to familiarize the crowd with their equipment and tactics.

"Kids see us in our gear, and get scared," said Harold Harris, a civilian firefighter employed on Fort Stewart. "If there is a fire, we want kids to know we are there to help and not to run away."

Harris extended the ladder on a fire truck, climbed to the top and waved to onlookers.

Military police working dogs and their trainers showed the crowd how the dogs react to different scenarios and how well they obey commands. Volunteers from the audience put on protective clothing and got to experience what it feels like to be halted by a police dog.

The purpose of the demonstration is to show the community how to react if they are approached by a dog handler, said Staff Sgt. Matthew S. Drexel, a Soldier with the 179th Military Police Detachment.

A portable stage was set up for a variety of acts, including a martial arts demonstration and a dancing group, the Knightsteppers.

The Knightsteppers are a group of children in grades three through six from Brittin Elementary School who make up their own steps and produce a show, said Kathy Jones, the Knightsteppers coach. The children have been practicing for the show since August.

Free hot dogs, chips, cookies and sno-cones were given to the crowd.

"ACS has partnered with community agencies to educate soldiers and their families about our resources in time of need," Cusimano said.

"We basically are here to provide a fun time and to observe October as Domestic Violence Month," he added.

Character counts ...

CYS helps instill children's values

Sgt. Craig Zentkovich

Hunter Public Affairs

Child and Youth Services at Hunter Army Airfield initiated a program called Character Counts — a program for kids that instills and reaffirms ethical values.

The now Army-wide program, based on the Six Pillars of Character — trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, fairness, caring and citizenship — culminated Oct. 19 through 25 with National Character Counts Week.

"The children practice (Character Counts Week) every day in the way they act toward others," said Terri McMillan,

Hunter Child and Youth Services director. "(The children) are doing now what they've done year round — giving."

Thirty-five children at Hunter, ranging in age from six to 18, observed National Character Counts Week by putting together gift baskets filled with homemade cookies, cakes and candy as well as designing and making buttons commemorating the week. On Friday, the children hopped in vans and personally delivered a basket each to the military police at Montgomery Gate, Wilson Gate and the two fire stations on Hunter.

"The MPs are always out there — rain or shine, hot or cold," said Yvonne Greene, CYS middle school manager. "The children wanted to show (the Soldiers) that the work doesn't go unnoticed."

Spc. Ike R. Sims, 293rd Military Police Company, Hunter Detachment, was more than grateful. "It makes me feel good that people, especially kids, show appreciation for the job we as Soldiers do here," he said. "We shouldn't have to go overseas to receive recognition."

Overall, Character Counts Week on Hunter was a tremendous success, according to McMillan.

"The kids do all of this and ask for nothing in return," she said. "They just want to show that they're a part of the community."

According to Sims and others at Hunter, they've more than proven it.

he said. His performance modifications have increased his car's output from its stock 127 horsepower to 160.

"It's fun to beef it up. It's fun to pull up to a Disgustang (Mustang) and beat him, while he's thinking, 'What does he have?'"

The only classic car in the competition was a 1970 Buick Electra 225 convertible, owned by Maj. James Sears, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Division Support Command.

Sears was confident that his car's authenticity would prevail. "I think I'm gonna win. You think I'm gonna lose — you've got the wrong guy. I've got the only classic; that's my angle. I don't have the 'bling bling' rims — I've got the classics. The only thing not original on this car is the radio, because they didn't have sound like this back then."

Winners:

Best Cars:

- 1st Place — Carlyn Bradbury
- 2nd Place — Robert Bonis
- 3rd Place — Chuckie Eaves

Best Audio:

- 1st Place — Frank Roberson
- 2nd Place — Christopher Turnage
- 3rd Place — Timothy Lusik

Pre-Halloween haunts ...

Sgt. Craig Zentkovich

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

God really doesn't make junk

Chaplain (Capt.)
Richard H. Bratton

Special to the Frontline

It's called "Kopi Luwak" and it is the most expensive coffee in the world. Costing as much as $300 per pound, it is so rare that only 500-1000 pounds are marketed per year. You see, the beans that make the "Kopi Luwak" coffee comes from monkey dung. Actually, Indonesian Civets, a marsupial that looks a lot like a cat, heads through a patch of coffee trees, looking for the biggest and best fruit. The critter eats the fruit, not actually chewing it up, and the beans pass thru the digestive tract, reducing to just the beans, that are then passed out. The beans are then gathered to be sold as a coffee that has become a delicacy in the world of coffee drinkers worldwide. The critics say that the coffee's taste is remarkable. I will just have to take their word for it!

Sometimes, as I talk with soldiers and their families, I see people, who are God's creations, feeling so defeated and unworthy of God's grace. This feeling can sometimes cause them to live life in a vicious spiritual cycle that prevents them from being all that God has created them to be. This unworthy feeling can create such a hopeless feeling in some that they can't even muster-up enough energy to call on God to help.

In the New Testament account of when Jesus heals a dying servant of a Roman Centurion, (Matthew chapter 8), Jesus Christ tells the Roman Centurion that he will go to his home to heal his servant. The centurion replied, "Lord, I do not deserve to have you come under my roof. But just say the word, and my servant will be healed" (Matthew 8:8 NIV). Many of us feel the same way this century on felt. We have things in our past or possibly even the present that causes us to feel that we are too unworthy for God to love or even come to where we are.

What we forget is that God has made it a routine to use the unworthy and unlikely to do the unbelievable. As we read throughout the Bible, we see that Moses, the one used by God to lead the Israelites out of captivity, was a murderer, King David, the man after God's heart, was an Adulterer, and one of the greatest women in the Bible, Esther, was a harem girl. The apostle Peter was impulsive, Matthew was a tax collector, and the Apostle Paul once persecuted Christians before his conversion. And finally, Jesus, the Son of God, had to be born in a stable where animals ate and slept.

You see, God uses the unlikely to do the unbelievable. Remember, if man can take coffee beans that has passed through the digestive tract of a monkey, and turn it into the most expensive coffee in the world, then just try to imagine what God can do with your life if you would let Him. As Paul wrote to the early church in Rome, "Now to him who is able to do immeasurably more than all we ask or imagine, according to his power that is at work within us, to him be glory in the church and in Christ Jesus throughout all generations, forever and ever! Amen" (Ephesians 3:20-21 NIV). When it is God's power at work within us, we can be sure that great things are going to happen. These things will be greater than we can even imagine or ask! Actually, the scripture says, "immeasurably more." Feeling unworthy? Let God do the unbelievable in your life! God Bless
